Ut Pictura Poeſis erit, ſimiliſque Poeſi
Sit Pictura ——— ———

THERE is no one Subject in the World that is more frequently talk'd of, or leſs underſtood, than Painting; for, tho' Nature is the Original of that Art, as well as all others, there requires ſo much Knowledge in the Artiſt in the Choice of Objects, and ſo much Taſte in the Judge to reliſh, and diſtinguiſh his own Beauties, that a great Genius and a true Critick are almoſt as rare one as another. All Perſons, as Mr. Pope very well obſerves, have the Seeds of Judgment in their Minds, and a Taſte for Painting deſcends to the meaneſt of the People; but very few even among the Greateſt have cultivated their own Minds enough to have a compleat Knowledge of that divine Art. Indeed I will venture to aſſert that Painters themſelves are not always the beſt Judges, and many, who have known all the mechanical Part of their Profeſſion to Admiration, have been amazingly defective in the grand Principles of Deſigning, and thereby juſtly render'd themſelves liable to the ſevereſt Cenſure. Painting is as much a Science as an Art, which the Painters frequently forget, and therefore confine their Opinions more to the Execution than the Deſign, more to the Hand than the Head: They talk and think of their Art, as an Art merely, and are conſequently better pleas'd with the Slights of the Pencil, and the Cheat of Colouring, than the nobler Choice of Subject, Diſtinction of Paſſions, or the Simplicity and Grandeur of the Whole. 'Tis to this unhappy Miſtake that many of the beſt Pictures are ſo faulty in the laſt, that we can hardly reliſh the Beauty of the firſt, and the Gentleman Critick who is ignorant of Painting as an Art, juſtly condemns it on the Principles of Science. Michael Angelo's Laſt Judgment is a flagrant Proof of this, where the moſt ſolemn Scene that the Imagination can frame is turn'd into Farce, by his fantaſtick Repreſentation of Devils, and the ridiculous Puniſhments he has inflicted on the Damned: The Story of Judith and Holofernes, a Tranſaction of the moſt ſecret and dangerous Nature, has been deſcrib'd in the Entrance of a Tent, and in the View of a whole Army, with a moſt formidable Row of Braſs Cannon in Proſpect to make the Abſurdity compleat. In like Manner Joſeph has run away from his Miſtreſs in a full-bottom'd Peruke, and Milton's Satan appear'd like a Perſonage of common Size, while his Spear has been magnified to the real Proportion of an Admiral's Maſt. There is no End to the Blunders of this Nature which the beſt Painters have fallen into, and theſe Examples only ſerve as the moſt favourable Specimen that can be made of them. 'Tis owing to the ſame Ignorance that we ſo frequently ſee real and imaginary Perſons, Truth and Metaphor, join'd in one and the ſame Action: Nothing is more common than ſuch Errors in the Decoration of Popiſh Altars, and I myſelf have ſeen a Figure of Grief lamenting over a dead Jeſus, with a real Sword ſtruck thro' her Heart to denote the Sharpneſs of her Sorrow. 'Tis what I am ſorry to ſay, but few Painters ſeem acquainted with the Author from whom the well-known Motto of this Paper is taken; if they were, ſurely they would never ſo notoriouſly tranſgreſs that incomparable Precept: For as on the one Hand Horace inſiſts that a Poem ſhould be a ſpeaking Picture, ſo, on the other, 'tis as clear that a Picture ſhould be a living Poem; which is as much as to ſay that a Picture ſhould be fram'd on all the Laws of Beauty, and Good Senſe; Good Senſe in the ſevereſt Choice of a Subject, and in expreſſing that Subject to the beſt Advantage, and Beauty in giving a Grace, Spirit, and Uniformity to the Whole: In ſhort, no Picture can be good that will not afford a fine poetical Deſcription, as no Poem can be beautiful that will not make as good a Figure in a Picture. Now nothing is a greater Objection to the Genius of the Painters than their Want of Invention; few of them have Spirit enough even to touch upon a new Story, or venture on a Subject that has not been very often handled before. Hence you have ſuch innumerable Eſſays on the ſame Hiſtory or Fable; hence the Bible and Ovid are the Books that have furniſh'd the greateſt Variety of Pictures, and ſcarce any one Author beſide is taken Notice of: But fewer ſtill have commenc'd Authors themſelves, that is to ſay, invented both the Story and the Execution; tho' certainly 'tis as much in their Power as the Poet's, and would redound as much to their Reputation, as the late Progreſs of a Harlot by the ingenious Mr. Hogarth will ſufficiently teſtify. Another very material Error in the Duty of Painting is this, that the Profeſſors are too apt to neglect the ſettling a perfect Idea of Beauty in general, or ſub-dividing it into all its different Parts and Proportions; thus we ſee Numbers of very grand Compoſitions where Beauty does not ſeem to be thought of at all, and Numbers of others where Beauty was the immediate Subject, and yet where 'tis as hard to be found as in any of the former; witneſs the Multitude of Venus's and Madona's that have been produc'd in the Schools of Italy, and thence have wander'd all over Europe. I don't ſay that none of them have hit on this delicate Charm, but they are ſo few, that they only ſerve to convince us of the Poſſibility. Neither have they always been more happy on other Subjects, that requir'd a ſuitable Quantity of this divine Requiſite: Principal Figures have been ſo poorly diſtinguiſh'd, that they would only have been known by their Place, and, when finely painted, have been loſt in the Groupe of unneceſſary Perſons about them. The Point of Time has as often been violated as the Laws of Beauty and Harmony: Lord Shaftſbury's fine Critique is very little known among the preſent Profeſſors, and nothing like it had ever been publiſh'd to the World before his Time: Hence you may very often ſee two oppoſite Sides of an Action in the ſame Piece, and a Picture which is but a Moment's View, painted as progreſſively as a Hiſtory or a Fable that perſued the whole Series of a Man's Life. Neither are they generally more exact in their Draperies and Decorations; ſome, in one Piece, collecting together all the Habits of the Univerſe, and others as ſervilely creeping after one, without any Grace or Variety at all.——

There are few Pieces but what ſtand in Need of Decoration, and yet there are fewer ſtill where 'tis us'd chaſtly and properly, or where it adds any real or natural Beauty to the Picture; the original End and Deſign of Ornament is to improve and ſet off the principal Subject to the beſt Advantage, and herein lies the great Proof of the Judgment and Genius of the Painter; for too much confuſes the Piece and ſacrifices the Whole to a Part, and too little inſinuates a Barrenneſs of Invention, or betrays a Negligence that is even injurious to the Compoſition in general.——Attitude and Diſpoſition of Objects are two other capital Points to be obſerv'd both by the Artiſt and the Judge; by the firſt we underſtand the Poſition, Grace and Action of each independent Figure, and by the laſt what the Painters call grouping, or connecting the Whole: The Art of one conſiſts in ſo ordering and regulating the Subject, that all the Perſons concern'd in it ſhall direct your Eye to the Chief, and the Chief himſelf appear the Band and Union of the reſt: The Groupe that will not ſtand this Teſt is not good as a Groupe, tho' every Individual is a Maſter-Piece, and yet 'tis a Teſt ſo ſevere that we very ſeldom find any that will bear it. Another Particular to be obſerv'd in Grouping is this, that no more Figures ſhould be introduc'd than are abſolutely eſſential to the Action, and if any one may be ſpar'd, 'tis a Fault that the moſt beautiful Figure can hardly atone for; Grouping of a Story is telling a Tale with the Pencil, all that helps on elegantly with the Narration is right, all that does not anſwer this End is an Incumbrance, and to be lopp'd off accordingly. Paſſion, or that Expreſſion of Face which is the Language of Painting, is the Philoſophy which the Artiſt ought principally to ſtudy, for without an abſolute Command of this Maſter-Beauty, the greateſt Perfections of Attitude, the moſt finiſh'd Groupe, and the moſt mellow Colouring are in vain. 'Tis the univerſal Language of the Soul, what all Nations underſtand, and are affected by, and the great and noble Advantage that this Science has over all the others in the World: Neither is it the ſimple Working of the Paſſions only, ſuch as Grief, Love, Joy, Anger, &c. that the Painter ſhould be Maſter of, but all their different Modifications, all their Relations to one another, which is the moſt difficult Task of the Pencil, and what gives the greateſt Pleaſure when executed with Succeſs. Beſide, there are certain common Actions that partake, in ſome Degree, of the Paſſions, ſuch as Attention, Contemplation, Perplexity, &c. that ought to be ſtudied too, that the Student might be as perfect in them as the others. ——Contraſte, or the Oppoſition of Objects to each other, is another eſſential Part of the Painter's Art; and this conſiſts in grand and general Diſpoſition of Lights and Shades, in diverſifying the Attitude of the Groupe, in varying the Paſſions, in oppoſing the Colours themſelves, and even in making one Part of the ſame Figure, a Relief to the other. To make the Figures round and ſwelling, and the Back Ground flat and diſtant from the Eye, is the grand Contraſte of all, and the utmoſt Effort of Light and Shade. In ſhort, nothing leſs than a general and univerſal Knowledge will make a Painter, and even he will find it very difficult to make his Art and Underſtanding agree. Neither is a good Critick made at a much leſs Expence; for whoever will judge well muſt underſtand the Principles of the Arts he judges of, and that is ſo ſeldom attain'd to, that Numbers miſtake their Love of the Art for Judgment in it; but 'tis too often a Zeal contrary to Knowledge, and their Misfortune 'tis very probable is mine.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER: Or, UNIVERSAL JOURNAL.

SIR,

YOU have ſometimes made proper Reflections on the eminent Productions of your contemporary Authors. I hope, as Occaſion offers, you will ſtill purſue the ſame Method; and, in particular, take Notice of a Book juſt publiſh'd, entitled, ALCIPHRON, or the MINUTE PHILOSOPHER. It is written, after the Manner of the Ancients, by Way of Dialogue; which is at the ſame Time inſtructive and entertaining.

If Truth and Virtue, ſet to view in the faireſt Light, and ſhining with native Charms, demand the Love and Admiration of every rational Being, the ingenious Author deſerves to be applauded for his excellent Performance. You are deſired to inſert the following Paſſage, taken from the fifth Dialogue, as a Specimen; in which is briefly ſhown how much the Chriſtian Religion, in its genuine Simplicity, conduces to the Comfort and Happineſs of Mankind.——

To me it ſeems the Man can ſee neither deep nor far, who is not ſenſible of his own Miſery, Sinfulneſs, and Dependence; who doth not perceive that this preſent World is not deſigned nor adapted to make rational Souls happy; who would not be glad of getting into a better State, and who would not be overjoy'd to find, that the Road leading thither was the Love of God and Man, the practiſing every Virtue, the living reaſonably while we are here upon Earth, proportioning our Eſteem to the Value of Things, and ſo uſing this World as not to abuſe it. For this is what Chriſtianity requires. It neither injoins the Naſtineſs of the Cynic, nor the Inſenſibility of the Stoic. Can there be a higher Ambition than to overcome the World, or a wiſer than to ſubdue ourſelves, or a more comfortable Doctrine than the Remiſſion of Sins, or a more joyful Proſpect than that of having our baſe Nature renewed and aſſimilated to the Deity, our being made Fellow-Citizens with Angels, and Sons of God? Did ever Pythagoreans, or Platoniſts, or Stoics, even in Idea, or in Wiſh, propoſe to the Mind of Man purer Means, or a nobler End? How great a Share of our Happineſs depends upon Hope! How totally is this extinguiſhed by the minute Philoſophy! On the other Hand, how is it cheriſhed and raiſed by the Goſpel! Let any Man who thinks in earneſt but conſider theſe Things, and then ſay which he thinks deſerveth beſt of Mankind, he who recommends, or he who runs down Chriſtianity? Which he thinks likelier to lead a happy Life, to be a hopeful Son, an honeſt Dealer, a worthy Patriot; he who ſincerely believes the Goſpel, or he who believes not one Tittle of it? He who aims at being a Child of God, or he who is contented to be thought, and to be, one of Epicurus's Hogs? And in fact do but ſcan the Characters, and obſerve the Behaviour of the common Sort of Men on both Sides: Obſerve and ſay which live moſt agreeably to the Dictates of Reaſon? How Things ſhould be, the Reaſon is plain; how they are, I appeal to Fact.

I am, Yours, &c.

The Speaker's Reprimand to Sir John Eyles, March 31, 1732.

Sir John Eyles,

THE Houſe have come to a Reſolution, that you are guilty of a great Irregularity, as a Commiſſioner and Truſtee for Sale of the forfeited Eſtates for the Uſe of the Publick, by impowering Mr. Samuel Allen, Secretary of the Commiſſioners and Truſtees for the Sale of the ſaid Eſtates, to ſign your Name, when abſent, in Order to make up the Number of Commiſſioners and Truſtees required by Act of Parliament, to Matters of Form, in Proceedings under the ſaid Act:

And have impoſed a Command upon me, which is the only one, I can truly ſay, that I ever received with any Uneaſineſs in the Place I now fit; not from any Doubt of the Juſtice of the Command, nor from any Unwillingneſs in me to obey an Order of the Houſe; but becauſe you, Sir, are unfortunately the Subject of it, for whom I have always had the greateſt Perſonal Regard.

The Offence you are guilty of, having come within the Notice of the Houſe, it was impoſſible it ſhould eſcape their Cenſure, as it had a Reference to a Truſt repoſed in you; repos'd by Parliament! the higheſt and moſt ſacred Authority any Subject of this Kingdom can act under! and with a particular Confidence in you, and the others join'd with you, becauſe of the Relation you bore to the Parliament: A Truſt of great Importance, and which required great Pains and Attention to it, and for that a very conſiderable Recompence was aſſigned to you out of the publick Treaſure. The Recompence, Sir, you enjoy'd; but the Pains and Attention expected from you, you fail'd in, and illegally delegated your Truſt in Inſtances where a falſe and fraudulent Uſe has been made of it.

But, happy for you, Sir, it appears to the Houſe to have been a Matter rather of evil Example, than evil Intention in you; for which Reaſon, the Reſolutions of the Houſe, on this Occaſion, have a Mixture of Juſtice and Mercy; and as your Offence will always juſtify the Cenſure of the Houſe upon you, let it be your Care, Sir, that your future Behaviour always juſtify the Lenity of the Houſe to you. Let the Juſtice of the Houſe make you fear, and the Clemency of the Houſe make it a Matter of Sorrow in you to offend again.

This Senſe, I perſuade myſelf you have of the Judgment the Houſe has paſs'd upon you, which is, That I reprimand you for your ſaid Offence, and I do reprimand you accordingly.

Sir John Eyles's Reply.

SIR,

I Am very much aſhamed of an Offence that has drawn upon me the Animadverſions and Cenſure of this Houſe; an Offence which, at the Time of committing it, I had ſcarce any Idea of being ſubject to Blame for. I am now made truly ſenſible of it, and the ſtrong and lively Colours in which you, Sir, have drawn it, will be to me a laſting Memento of future Caution.

The Judgment the Houſe has paſſed upon me I endure with a dutiful Submiſſion; and you, Sir, having ſhewn that Tenderneſs and Humanity which is agreeable to your Nature, in pronouncing it, and thereby, in ſome Degree, abated its Rigour, I cannot but expreſs my grateful and ſincere Acknowledgment to yourſelf, and alſo to the Houſe, for their Favour in not carrying this Cenſure to any further Conſequence.

A Letter from John Angelo Belloni, to the Gentlemen of the Committee of the Parliament of England, appointed to inſpect the Affairs of the Charitable Corporation.

GENTLEMEN, Rome, May 4, 1732.

'TIS with great Pleaſure that I embrace this Opportunity, which now offers, of ſhewing my Eſteem and Affection for the Engliſh Nation, in contributing to the Welfare and Advantage of many particular Perſons in that Kingdom, and, conſequently, to the Satisfaction of the Parliament, and of the whole Nation in general.

As the Frauds which have been committed in the Management of the Affairs of the Charitable Corporation have made a great Noiſe in the World, People, in theſe Parts, have been ſenſibly touched with the Misfortunes which they have produced, and are fully convinc'd, how much it concerned the whole Nation to find a Redreſs; and that this could not be effectually done unleſs (what the Parliament have not yet been able to procure) the Perſon, Papers, Books, and Effects of Mr. Thomſon ſhould be ſecured.

Having receiv'd Advice therefore, that the ſaid Mr. Thomſon intended to come to Rome, under a fictitious Name, the neceſſary Means were taken to ſeize him upon his Arrival, which was accordingly executed. At the ſame Time were ſeiz'd alſo his Papers, the Letters which he had receiv'd ſince he left England, Copies of the Letters which he had wrote to his moſt intimate Friends, and Minutes of his moſt ſecret Affairs. He is now a Priſoner in the Caſtle of St. Angelo, whereby he has been in a Manner forc'd into a Confeſſion and Diſcovery of the whole Myſtery of that Affair; and which he has done in ſo ample a Manner, as to give an Account, not only of the Books and Effects of the Company, but alſo of his own.

This being done, I was order'd to communicate this important Diſcovery, in the moſt proper Manner, for the Good and Advantage of the Engliſh Nation; for which Purpoſe I immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs to one of my Correſpondents at Paris, with all the Papers relating to that Affair, to the End they might be put in your Hands. But as it ſeems juſt, that the Proprietors of the Charitable Corporation, who are going to reap ſo great a Benefit from this Diſcovery, ſhould agree and conſent to certain Articles, before the Delivery of theſe Papers and Writings into your Hands; I have order'd my Correſpondent to inſiſt upon ſuch previous Agreement and Conſent, and to keep thoſe Writings in his own Cuſtody, merely as a Pledge, till Things ſhould be agreed upon; and I make no Doubt, but that this Precaution, as well as the Articles themſelves, will appear juſt and reaſonable to every Perſon concerned.

Having thus executed what I had in Truſt, I have nothing to add, but my ſincere Wiſh, that you may be aſſured of the Regard I have for the Engliſh Nation, and of the ardent Deſire I ſhall ever retain to promote their Welfare.

I am, &c. JOHN ANGELO BELLONI.

The Conditions ſigned with Thomſon's Hand, and incloſed with Belloni's Letter, viz.

MEmorand. which I humbly beg may be ſtipulated, and made the Conditions for delivering up the Books and Papers.

1. That my Sureties may have their Bonds up, in all for 5000l.

2. That Lancelot Ord, Eſq; who ſold me a ſmall Eſtate, the Value of 1000 300l. (after paying a Mortgage upon it) in Conſideration of an Annuity I was to pay him for Life, be allowed to take quiet Poſſeſſion of that Eſtate again.

3. My Father having taken a Bond in my Name from Mr. Blackwood, though the Money was his own, I deſire, upon his Proof of that, that he may be allowed to receive it upon a Power of Attorney I ſent him for that Purpoſe, and that they will not put him to Trouble, becauſe it happens to be in my Name.

[N. This Bond is only for 10,000l.]

4. There is ſomewhere a Bond of my Brother Samuel's. I deſire it may be delivered up, becauſe he is not in a Capacity to pay it.

5. I deſire, that thoſe who have had my Books and Papers in keeping, may have no Trouble upon their ſurrendering them, in Caſe in the Act that paſſes, any Penalty is annexed to that.

6. I deſire I may be enabled to pay about 2000 700l. private Debts I owe to a Number of People.

7. What is proper for myſelf, I ſubmit it; and I only obſerve, that I have at preſent diſcovered of my own private Effects, which will appear upon caſting up the Accounts, the Sum of 26,000l. and my Books and Papers will diſcover a much larger Sum. J. Thomſon.

N. B. Mr. CAVE, the undertaker and printer of the Gentleman's Magazine, having taken the opportunity, by his Place in the Poſt-Office, of diſperſing ſcandalous and ſcurrilous advertiſements in the country, and making mean applications to gentlemen, in order to prejudice them againſt even ſeeing obliges the proprietors to vindicate themſelves, and their performance. He, Firſt, charges us with inſinuating that the Gentleman's Magazine was, or would ſoon be, laid down; this is a notorious falſity, we having not ſo much as once mentioned, nor did we ever intend to take notice of, that performance, till aggravated thereto by his inſolent advertiſements. Secondly, He charges us with ſtealing his title; we appeal to the publick, whether the calling ours the London Magazine, in oppoſition to the Gentleman's, may be deemed ſo, any more than his title of the Monthly Intelligencer, in Oppoſition to ours of the Monthly Chronicle. And the very ſame objection which Mr Cave makes againſt our title of the London Magazine, will ſtand good againſt him for taking the title of Monthly Intelligencer, and will always ſerve as an anſwer to whatever he ſhall ſay or publiſh againſt our right in carrying on ſuch an undertaking. Thirdly, he charges us with ſupplanting him in his ſchemes; yet we ſhall prove, that he himſelf is the ſupplanter, by following our deſign in the Chronicle, not only by printing the Monthly Occurrences and Catalogue of Books, but alſo by printing the eſſays, poems, &c. from our journals; and we can't but think his aſſurance very extraordinary in reflecting upon us for compiling a book of this kind, from the publick papers, in ſeveral of which, he knows, we have a property; and we deſire he would ſatisfy the publick what right He (a proprietor of no one paper) has to a deſign of this nature, as he would inſinuate, excluſive of all others, even proprietors themſelves.

In other caſes, where perſons are upon a level (as Mr. Cave is not with us in this) the ſame deſign lies open to every one to execute in the beſt manner they can. Elſe, why have we ſo many Daily Papers, Evening Poſts, and Weekly Journals? In the Whitehall Evening Poſt, May the 20th, he boaſts of the decency of his printed advertiſement; and yet in ſome wretched lines, which are neither verſe nor proſe, at the end of that very advertiſement, compares us to the Devil. Very decent, indeed!

He is likewiſe unhappy enough to affect to be witty on our Printer's plac-of abed.; but wit is ſo little his talent, that like an edg'd tool, it only ſerves to cut his own fingers.

Mr. Cave has other ways to make himſelf eminent; for it may be juſtly obſerv'd, to his honour, that he is the firſt printer that ever put a Preface * at the end of a book, if that can be ſaid to have an end, which has neither head nor tail. In this poſterior Preface † he aſſerts his right to carry on ſuch a work, which was a diſpute we did not enter into; not doubting, but as he had begun, he would ſtill continue his project, tho' ever ſo unjuſt; we only defended our own right, and aſſerted, that proprietors of papers have as good a right as Mr. Cave; we dont doubt but the publick will allow a better.

As to Mr. Cave's pretended common report, that we have but a ſmall ſhare in publick papers, 'tis not improper to acquaint the publick, that he pillaged no leſs than 12 eſſays in April, beſides poems, from our papers: and we beg he would print one month without infringing our properties, that the world may ſee what a fine figure he will make without us. Though Mr. Cave has ſuppreſſed his firſt edition, becauſe he was aſhamed of the wretched paper and print, knowing it would bear no compariſon with ours, and artfully printed a ſecond little better, before called for; yet notwithſtanding this trifling alteration, we ſtill deſire that Gentlemen would compare them, and they will ſee, that tho' we have omitted ſome few things of little moment, that are in his, yet his omiſſions are much more conſiderable.

Mr Cave publiſh'd a long advertiſement in the Grub-ſtreet Journal, May 25, (tho' he had declared but a few days before he had other affairs to do, and ſhould leave it here, as little to the purpoſe, which has or ſhall merit moſt of the publick) wherein he ſays, we pretend that half a dozen men have a right to publiſh abridgments, and no one elſe; which is falſe. We aſſerted, and ſtill aſſert, that the proprietors of papers, who pay a valuable conſideration for, or are the firſt printers of eſſays, poems, &c. whether they are printers, ſtationers, booksellers, or freemen, and they only, have a real right, if there is ſuch a thing as right, to collect and abridge them, and not Mr. Cave, tho' a printer, and freeman; becauſe he is not a proprietor of any one paper now ſubſiſting; and we acknowledge, that any proprietor of papers has the ſame right as we; and, we hope, Mr. Cave will have the modeſty to allow, at leaſt, a much better than he.

Mr Ackers (tho' a printer, as well as Mr. Cave) is qualified for being a proprietor, by being a partner of the Weekly Regiſter; which Mr. Cave is not; therefore every eſſay, or poem, which is taken from thence, is his right, and Mr. Cave is the ſupplanter.

The charge of hindring his advertiſements on our accounts, in ſome papers, is likewiſe falſe; and we don't blame him for ſending them into the Country, provided they are not ſtuffed with ſcandalous and ſcurrilous falſhoods, like the laſt, which he ſilly kept ſecret in town, that we might never have the opportunity of ſeeing, and anſwering it.

Another charge is, That we have made mean applications to poſt-boys, and carriers; which is a ſcandal that deſerves as little credit as the former. And his bare-fac'd aſſertion, That we have had extraordinary aſſiſtance from Mr. C—l, the title-page man, is an aſperſion ſo falſe and baſe, as to be anſwered only with the contempt which, he knows, it deſerves.

We can't help wondring at the ſtupidity of Mr. Cave to think, that we deſired him (a prejudiced perſon, and no judge in his own cauſe) to make a compariſon of the two magazines. What candour and impartiality muſt the publick expect from his accurate and judicious compariſon? And tho' he is weak enough to think ſome readers may be caught by ſo pitiful a bait, we deſire all may be their own judges, without being biaſſed by the advertiſements of either ſide. We ſhall conſtantly keep the Gentleman's Magazine in our ſhops, for any gentleman that pleaſes to make the compariſon, though we have little reaſon to expect that Mr. Cave will be ſo fair as to take care that his DEALERS OF INTEGRITY do us the ſame juſtice.

We hope we have ſufficiently vindicated ourſelves from the charge of invading Mr. Cave's property; and, for the future, ſhall not regard his advertiſements, or inſinuations, tho' ever ſo ſcurrilous, or his ſtupid epigrams and ‡ puffs, tho ever ſo fulſome; but make it our whole endeavour to excel rather than wrangle, in confidence that gentlemen will encourage thoſe moſt by whom they are moſt agreeably entertained.

The LONDON MAGAZINE will be publiſh'd the beginning of every month, and will contain a CATALOGUE of BOOKS and PAMPHLETS, diſpoſed under their proper heads, with their prices, after the manner, and by the proprietors, of the Monthly Chronicle, now diſcontinued: and gentlemen may be ſupplied with them, ſending their names and places of abode to T. Cox at the Lamb under the Royal-Exchange; J. Wilford behind the Chapter-houſe near St Paul's; J. Clarke at the Golden-Ball in Duck-Lane; T. Aſtley at the Roſe over-againſt the north door of St. Paul's; and C. Ackers, printer, in St. John's-ſtreet. And we have leave from the wholeſale dealers in general, to declare, that their correſpondents in the country ſhall be punctually ſerved with them, they being willing that right and merit ſhould have its full ſcope.

Note, The Monthly Catalogue of Books, from 1723 to 1728, and the Monthly Chronicle, from 1728 to March 1732, may be had of the proprietors of the London Magazine.

* See his Advertiſement in the Daily Journal of May the 16th. † See the laſt Page of the Gentleman's Magazine, April 1732. ‡ See the London Magazine, p. 81.

To the Writer of an Epigram on the Gentleman's Magazine, wherein that celebrated Work is compared to the Creation, the Pieces from whence it is compil'd a Chaos, and the Author God Almighty.

NO leſs, it ſeems, than the Creator's name
Blaſphem'd can raiſe your project into fame;
To falſify, and plunder, maim, and ſpoil,
Is what you match with the Almighty's toil:
*Profane attempt! * Not his more vile, or vain,*
Who ap'd the God-head in a puppet ſcene;
Who turn'd to farce what pow'rs ſupream had dont,
And bid a candle emulate the ſun:
Such is the modeſt claim you make to praiſe,
And ſuch the tenour of your impious layes.
Nor this alone; whate'er the learned throng
Labour in proſe, or animate in ſong,
You ſtile a Chaos, till you ſhape the whole
To harmony, and give the maſs a ſoul.
Fooliſh and falſe! ſo Æſop's Daw appear'd
Fine in the ſpoil of ev'ry other bird:
So boaſted while the cheat remain'd unknown,
And ſo was ſcorn'd when each reſum'd his own.
——Drudge on dull grov'ling thing without a name,
And to thy own ſelf-flatt'ry owe thy ſhame!
To foil ſuch weakneſs, is to loſe renown,
Thy own dead weight will ſink thee ſtreight down;
No wretch is low enough to rival thee,
Thou haſt a genius for abſurdity.
